

Artificial Intelligence (AI) is a branch of computer science that focuses on building systems capable of performing tasks that normally require human intelligence.

AI applications include recommendation systems, virtual assistants, autonomous vehicles, and medical diagnosis.

Machine learning is a subset of AI where systems learn patterns from data.